PREFACE.

FOR some years past it has been in my mind to publish a set of coloured illustrations of the birds of my native country, and my residence in England now gives me the opportunity of compassing my desire.

Before commencing this weighty task it has occurred to me that it would be useful to publish a "Handlist of the Birds of Australasia," to invoke the criticism and co-operation of ornithologists, in order to enhance the value of my larger undertaking.

This List is founded upon the "Handlist of Birds" by Dr. Bowdler Sharpe, who has promised me his support, and has, as will be seen over, encouraged me to commence the task of publishing my proposed work "The Coloured Figures of the Birds of Australasia." Dr. Sharpe has very kindly lent me the proofs of the fifth volume of his "Handlist" (now in the press) to enable me to make my own "Handlist" more complete. I also have the support of the Hon. Walter Rothschild and Dr. Hartert, of the Tring Museum, as well as of other eminent ornithologists.

Within the last few years, however, the principal additions to our knowledge of Australian birds have been due to the work of Australian naturalists, notably to Mr. A. J. North, of the Australian Museum, Sydney, Messrs. D. Le Souëf, A. J. Campbell, and Robert Hall, of Melbourne, and many other naturalists whose names are too numerous to mention here, but to whom I hope to do justice in my larger work.

This "Handlist," like all compilations of the kind, is sure to contain imperfections, especially as regards geographical distribution. In the course of his work at the Natural History Museum the attention of the author has been frequently drawn by Dr. Bowdler Sharpe to the want of exact definition of the ranges of many of the Australian species, and though such wide terms as "New South Wales," "Queensland," &c., are sufficient for a general handlist of birds such as that published by the British Museum, it is only in the fifth volume of that work that the ranges of Australian birds are given with any attempt at exact definition, from notes supplied by Mr. A. J. North. The author will, therefore, be grateful to any of his brother ornithologists who will send him notes on the geographical ranges of any species, as well as any observations on habits, nesting, food, migration, &c., for all of which he promises full acknowledgment in his forthcoming work.

My intention is to publish a set of hand-coloured plates of the birds of Australasia, drawn by Mr. J. G. Keulemans, to which work this "Handlist" is a preliminary. In preparing the latter

I have referred to the works of my predecessors in the same field of inquiry, with the following abbreviations:—

G = Gould's "Handbook of the Birds of Australia," 1865.

R = Ramsay's "Tabular List of the Birds of Australia," 1888.

C = Campbell's "Nests and Eggs of Australian Birds," 1900.

N = North's "Nests and Eggs of Birds found Breeding in Australia and Tasmania," 1901, &c.

H = Hall's "Key to the Birds of Australia," 1906.

GREGORY M. MATHEWS.

[LETTER.]

British Museum (Nat. Hist.),

South Kensington, 20th Oct., 1907.

My Dear Sir,

I have perused your "Handlist of Australian Birds" with much interest, and it gives me great pleasure to welcome you to this Museum, where every facility shall be given you for working out your project of publishing the "Coloured Figures of the Birds of Australasia," and I am glad to hear that the Hon. Walter Rothschild has given you similar facilities at his museum at Tring.

I think it a wise step on your part to issue a "Handlist" of Australian birds, as it will clear the ground before commencing your larger work, and by your references to Gould, Ramsay, North, Campbell, and Hall, you will give full credit to those excellent naturalists, who have laid the foundation of all future work on the birds of Australia.

No one can doubt that the time has arrived for the issue of a new work on Australian birds, illustrated with coloured plates, as Gould's work has been long out of print and is very costly. Since the date of his "Handbook," too, a school of excellent observers has arisen in the southern continent, whose work has greatly enlarged our knowledge of Australian ornithology. Having lived in different parts of the continent yourself, and having now the leisure for working, together with a very complete library of books on the natural history of Australia, I know no one better equipped for such a task as you are about to inflict on yourself.

I feel certain, too, that the support of our colonial colleagues will be gladly given to your endeavour, and I am also sure that they will receive full acknowledgment for all their help. This is particularly necessary in a work like yours, so that everyone who contributes shall recognise that his notes will be published in extenso, and that he will receive the full credit for his assistance. I am sure that your appeal for help will meet with a ready response from Australian naturalists.

As regards your "Handlist," I think that this will serve a useful purpose, as it will supplement, to a certain degree, the useful "Key" published by Mr. Robert Hall, and the older lists of Gould and Dr. Ramsay. It will form a groundwork for your larger publication, of which it may be considered the starting-point.

Wishing you every success,

Believe me,

Yours very sincerely,

R. BOWDLER SHARPE.
